THE OLD QUESTION.

The Reno Gazette every few days comes to the front with some especially ridiculous question relative to silver.

The last is as follows:

Does the APPEAL or Independent know of more earnest advocates of free coinage than Governor Colcord or ex-Congressman Bartine?

The APPEAL thinks it knows of a good many people in Nevada more earnest in their advocacy of free coinage than either of these gentlemen.

Both of the parties named are thinking, sensible men, and they know perfectly well that the Republican party, to which they still claim allegiance, is not a free coinage party.

How they expect to accomplish anything for silver by remaining with a party that for years has persistently refused to do anything for silver, is beyond our comprehension.

These gentlemen claim to be earnest advocates of free silver, but it remains undisputed that they are not sufficiently earnest in their desire to see silver remonetized, to cast off the shackles of party and ally themselves with a party that pledges itself to "free coinage 16 to 1."

That is the only test of a man's earnestness that we know of.

If all the men of both parties who are for free coinage would simply repudiate their old political affiliations and vote the ticket of free silver, the thing would be accomplished in short order.

Wall Street cannot handle silver men in the Silver party, but it can handle them in both the old parties.

The Gazette talks about their hopeless minority in Congress, but their minority is not a bit more hopeless than a Republican or a Democrat who is a Silver man.

Does the Gazette for a moment believe that a Congressman elected by the Silver party of Nevada would be any more helpless than a Republican elected to Congress from Nevada?

Could any man be more helpless than was Congressman Bartine while in Congress?

He made a hard and able fight for silver, but the Republican party had him bound hand and foot whenever they wanted him in that fix, and once in committee or caucus he was no more real use to silver than some one in China.

Mr. Newlands was not any more successful, but his presence in Congress as an independent Silver man was a notification to the Gold Bugs that a new party was rising in the West to fight the battles of silver outside the old party lines.

Now suppose we return Mr. Newlands, and a few more Western States fall in line with us, the people will say:

"The new Silver party is growing; we must pay some attention to it."

But if Nevada and the other States after their gallant showing for silver in '92, falls back in the old party ruts, and return Republican Congressmen, then the people of the East will have good reason to say:

"The Western States are back again in the old party traces; the silver movement is killed. Hurrah for the gold standard."

There will be rejoicing and champagne suppers in Wall street and our Eastern silver fighters will feel a sinking of the heart.

But Nevada has embarked in the fight, and, God willing, she will stay there. There are earnest, brave men in the East who are carrying the silver banner to the front, uninterrupted by the threat of the party lash and unmindful of past party alliances, and we can only strengthen the hands and the hearts of these men by keeping Nevada in line for silver until the cause of free coinage is recognized as the living, paramount, political issue of the day.

If men who claim to be true silver men wish to linger by the way side while the onward march is on, those who prefer fighting in the front to resting on the grassy slope, spread out by the Republican leaders in Nevada, will have to part company with their old associates.
